

Instructor: Date:

Learner: Regional Branch:

Program: Center:

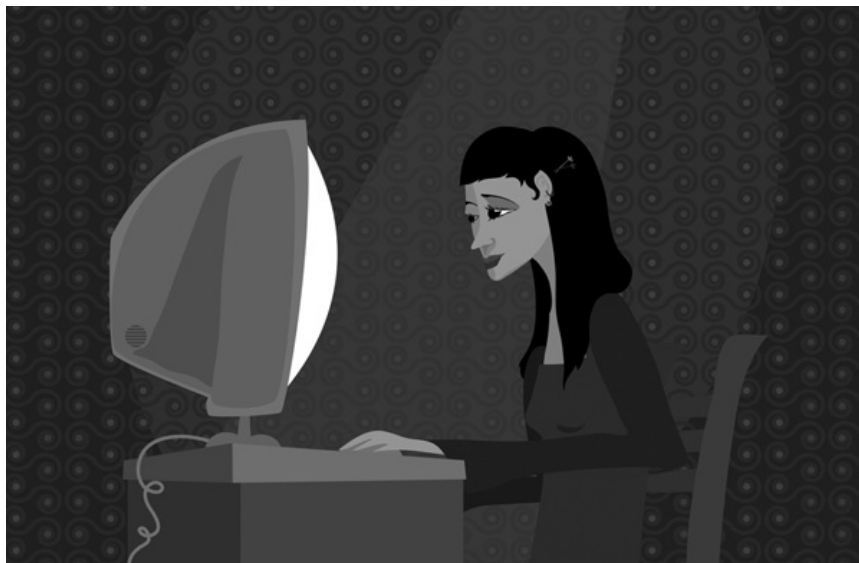

CONTENT

- Let's Start! • Let's Explore! • Let's Practice! • Extension Activity • Target Words • Learning Points

Let's Start!

Everyone is online these days!

Learning Outcome

Describe necessity, duty, advice, or strong disapproval in written and spoken situations according to work and social contexts.

Ask your partner:

- How much time do you spend online?
- Is your social life suffering from this? Why or why not?

Can Do Statements

- I can talk about technology and personal dilemmas.
- I can say what will have happened or what will have been happening.
- I can say that one situation is dependent on another situation.

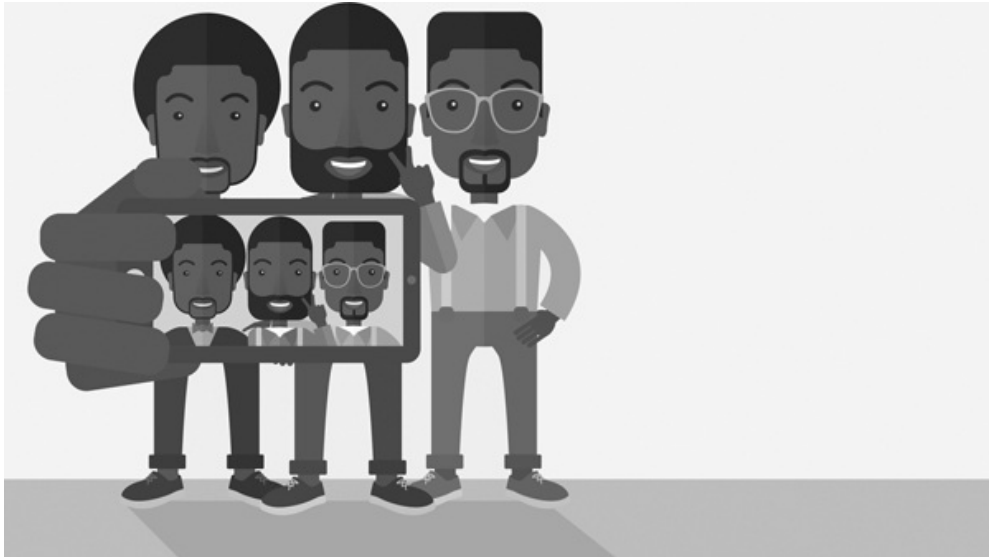

Let's Explore!

People demonstrate what they are doing rather than just doing it.

* "Demonstrate" means to show or display.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

If it weren't for the stress people put on documenting their every move, they would be living their lives. They are not. If it weren't for the need to demonstrate what they were doing or seeing rather than just doing or seeing, everything would be different. Had it not been ingrained in them, children wouldn't be snapping cell phone selfies of themselves with friends and texting about it rather than speaking to them.

Were it not for the internet, I would see these same children playing. I do not. I would have been part of this trend but for the constant assertion of my parents that I should not be tempted to publish my life to the world. If it hadn't been for my choice to live rather than document, I probably wouldn't be writing this now.

By contrast, an acquaintance of mine documents continuously. By the time she finishes university, she will have catalogued every outfit she has worn. She will have been posting pictures of every beau, complete with comments. By graduation day, she'll have been tweeting about every class, or function she had been to.

It wouldn't surprise me to hear, one day in the future, - 'You won't have seen yet, of course, but Stacey has actually selfied her way through her own wedding!' or 'You won't have gotten the video of Stacey delivering her son, of course. I'll send it along to you now' - and have it all forwarded to me before I can say please don't!

Don't get me wrong. I do go online. I write e-mails and glance at MeBook pages with friends even though I don't MeBook myself. The difference is that by the end of my life, I will literally have experienced it, rather than just seen pictures of it!

Let's Practice!

Sam talks about people that are addicted to social media.

Instructions: Read the sentences. Classify them into the correct category.

1. By the time she finishes university, she will have catalogued every outfit she has worn.
2. The rain will have stopped by the end of June.
3. They will have been playing on the stage for over an hour by the time the other band arrives.
4. By next week, you will have been promoted.
5. By graduation day, she'll have been tweeting about every class, or function she had been to.

Action in the future that takes place before another action in the future

Action in the future that is unfinished by the time another action in the future takes place

Let's Practice!

Peter uses technology in a moderate way now.

Instructions: Use the words from the Word Bank to correctly complete each sentence. Read the sentences aloud. Check your pronunciation with your instructor.

Word Bank

put on documenting their / will have catalogued / snapping cell phone selfies / been tweeting about every class / literally have experienced it / been ingrained

1. If it weren't for the stress people _____ every move, they would be living their lives.
2. Had it not _____ in them, children wouldn't be _____ of themselves with friends and texting about it rather than speaking to them.
3. By the time she finishes university, she _____ every outfit she has worn.
4. By graduation day, she will have _____ or function she had been to.
5. I write e-mails and glance at Facebook pages. The difference is that by the end of my life, I will _____, rather than just seen pictures of it!

Extension Activity

Take a critical look at social media pages.

Instructions: Complete the following steps. Fill in the Self-Assessment.

- Have a look at some social media pages and take notes on what you see and read there.
- What can you infer about the page owner by looking at their social interactions?
- How do others interact with them?
- How important is what they say to each other?
- Write non-subjective statements about what you see.
- State your perception about what will have happened to those pages by the end of the decade.

Self-Assessment

Yes No

I make a critical assessment of people's social media pages.

☐ ☐

I state whether there is too little or too much information about the people available on the pages.

☐ ☐

I make inferences about people's traits through social media pages.

☐ ☐

I make non-subjective statements about what I see.

☐ ☐

I use the Future Perfect tense.

☐ ☐

I share my ideas.

☐ ☐

Target Words

- to document (verb): to record information about e.g. If it weren't for the stress people put on documenting their every move, they would be living their lives.
- ingrained (adjective): well-established e.g. Had it not been ingrained in them, children wouldn't be snapping cell phone selfies.
- assertion (noun): statement strongly believed to be true
e.g. I would have been part of this trend but for the constant assertion of my parents that I should not be tempted to publish my life to the world.
- to catalog (verb): make a systematic list e.g. By the time she finishes university, she will have catalogued every outfit she has worn.
- to post (verb): to put something on the internet for others to see e.g. She will have been posting pictures of every beau, complete with comments.
- to deliver (a baby) (verb): to give birth e.g. You won't have gotten the video of Stacey delivering her son, of course.
- literally (adverb): truly; actually e.g. The difference is that by the end of my life, I will literally have experienced it, rather than just seen pictures of it!

Learning Points

Future Perfect

You use the Future Perfect tense to talk about an event that will have happened before another one in the future.

Structure:

will have + past participle

Example:

By the time she finishes university, she will have catalogued every outfit she has worn.

With the Future Perfect Continuous, an action in the future is unfinished by the time another action in the future starts. It is most often used with an expression of time.

Structure:

subject + will have been + present participle

Example:

By graduation day, she'll have been tweeting about every class she has ever been to.

Examples:

- By the time she finishes university, she will have catalogued every outfit she has worn.
- By graduation day, she'll have been tweeting about every class, or function she had been to.
- She will have been posting pictures of every beau, complete with comments for years by then.

Learning Points

Unreal Conditional: Expressing Causal Connections

You use the Unreal Conditional to express a relationship between a cause and an effect in a hypothetical way.

You use If it was not for + noun phrase to say that one situation depends on another situation or person to come true. You use If it weren't for ... if you want to express yourself more formally.

Example:

If it weren't for the stress people put on documenting their every move, they would be living their lives.

If you want to make a causal connection to a past situation, you can use If it had not/hadn't been for + noun phrase.

In a formal context you can use Had it not been ... or Were it not for ...

Example:

Were it not for the Internet, these children would be playing outside.

Examples:

- If it weren't for the need to demonstrate what they were doing or seeing rather than just doing or seeing, everything would be different.
- Had it not been ingrained in them, children wouldn't be snapping cell phone selfies of themselves with friends and texting about it rather than speaking to them.
- I would have been part of this trend but for the constant assertion of my parents that I should not be tempted to publish my life to the world.

