

Instructor: Date:

Learner: Regional Branch:

Program: Center:

CONTENT

- Let's Start! • Let's Explore! • Let's Practice! • Extension Activity • Target Words • Learning Points

Let's Start!

Pronunciation Spot: There are so many ads on the net now!

Learning Outcome

Understand detailed descriptions of real or imaginary events and experiences in present, past or future and in spoken or written texts.

Ask your partner:

- What websites do you visit regularly?
- How many ads do you notice on pages you visit?
- Do you ever click on them? Why or why not?

Can Do Statements

- I can talk about technology and personal dilemmas.
- I can add emphasis by adding extra words.
- I can say and use words that are spelled the same but are pronounced differently.

Let's Explore!

I attribute some of this to my laziness

* "Laziness" is not wanting to put out the energy to do things.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

Where in the URL have I been on the computer? Ads have been chasing me all week! Whenever I go online, there they are doggedly following me! I alternate browsers hoping for an alternate experience, but the ad hounds have my scent! They pop up at me over and over again!

Last year I looked up incontinence products for my grandmother. After that, there they were, to the left, to the right, at the top, at the bottom of every single page I visited! Advertisers on the net appropriate spaces on every page - not appropriate at all! They have made their entrance, hoping to entrance me, hoping I will purchase, perchance?

I attribute some of this to my least positive attribute, laziness. I am not content to jettison the content from my browsing data. That way I'd have to record all those names to have a record of my favorite places, then separate them all into separate groups. I do remember the last time I deleted those URLs, something I should not have done on my own. I lost every password.

Then I had to resign to re-signing in at every website I frequent. Then, after that, I had to subject myself to studying up on the subject of erasing my digital imprint while keeping the things that I wanted. My frequent wanderings on the net are better now, for the most part anyway. I will purge the download data, cookies, cached images and files and browsing history, and then start again fresh in the morning.

Let's Practice!

Pay close attention to how these words are pronounced differently.

Instructions: Read the sentences aloud. Stress the bold syllables. Compare yourself to a partner. Correct each other's pronunciation.

1. to appropriate (verb) / appropriate (adjective)
Example: Advertisers on the net appropriate spaces on every page - not appropriate at all!
Reminder: Those two words have the accent in the same syllable, but as a verb, the last /a/ sounds like /ei/.
2. to attribute (verb) / attribute (noun)
Example: I attribute some of this to my least positive attribute.
3. content (adjective) / content (noun)
Example: I am not content to jettison the content from my browsing data.

Let's Practice!

There are a couple of things we need to bear in mind* when working in front of a computer screen.

*To "bear in mind" is to remember, to take into account.

Instructions: Underline all the words related to technology in the sentences. Practice saying the sentences aloud. Check your pronunciation with your instructor.

- 1) Where in the URL have I been on the computer?
- 2) Ads have been chasing me all week!
- 3) They pop up at me over and over again!
- 4) My frequent wanderings on the net are better now, for the most part anyway.
- 5) I will purge the download data, cookies, cached images and files and browsing history.

Extension Activity

Go online and look for heteronyms in the advertising that pops up.

Instructions: Complete the following steps. Fill in the Self-Assessment.

- Surf on the Internet and find as many heteronyms as you can.
- Make a list of them classifying them into adjectives, nouns, verbs or adverbs if available.
- Check the pronunciation of those words in an online dictionary.
- Practice the pronunciation.
- Write a sentence per each one.

Self-Assessment

Yes No

I understand what an heteronym is.

☐ ☐

I find examples of heteronyms.

☐ ☐

I practice the pronunciation of heteronyms.

☐ ☐

I write sentences using heteronyms.

☐ ☐

Target Words

- URL (noun): the address of a page on the Internet e.g. What URL have I been on?
- to chase (verb): to run after someone in order to catch him or her e.g. Ads have been chasing me all week!
- scent (noun): smell
e.g. I alternate browsers hoping for an alternate experience, but the ad hounds have my scent!
- hound (noun): a hunting dog
e.g. I alternate browsers hoping for an alternate experience, but the ad hounds have my scent!
- perchance (adverb): possibly; maybe e.g. They have made their entrance, hoping to entrance me, hoping I will purchase, perchance?
- cookie (noun): a file sent by a website to your computer which contains information about how you use the site
e.g. I will purge the download data, cookies, cached images and files and browsing history.
- cache (noun): type of computer memory in which information that is often in use can be stored temporarily and accessed quickly
e.g. I will purge the download data, cookies, cached images and files and browsing history.

Learning Points

Adding Emphasis

You add emphasis in a sentence by stressing important words or by adding words to support your intention. You add different words to emphasize different things or situations.

You add time phrases like whenever, day in, day out, or over and over to highlight the time of an action.

You add do to emphasize a verb action.

You add ... at all to emphasize a negative attribute of an adjective or phrase.

Remember, when you stress a word, your intonation rises and the word is said slightly longer and louder than the other words.

Practice reading these sentences from the text:

Examples:

- Whenever I go online, there they are doggedly following me!
- They pop up at me over and over again!
- After that, there they were, to the left, to the right, at the top, and at the bottom of every single page I visited!
- Advertisers on the net appropriate spaces on every page - not appropriate at all!
- I attribute some of this to my least positive attribute, laziness.
- I do remember the last time I deleted those URLs, something I should not have done on my own. I lost every password.

Learning Points

Heteronyms

Heteronyms are words that have the same spelling but have different pronunciations. Usually, heteronyms represent the different way of pronouncing the same word in two different forms of speech.

In many cases, the same word can be used as a noun and as a verb in English. The way you pronounce nouns and verbs follows a similar pattern.

For two syllable words, the noun is stressed on the first syllable, and the verb is stressed on the second syllable.

Example:

subject (noun)

subject (verb)

Practice pronouncing the following heteronyms. Pay attention to the stress, and notice how you can follow a pronunciation pattern based on the use of the word.

Examples:

- alternate - (ALT-er-nit) a different choice; (ALT-er-nayt) change back and forth
- appropriate - (ap-PROPE-ri-ayt) to take possession; (ap-PROPE-ree-it) proper
- attribute - (at-TRIB-ute) to believe something was caused or done by someone; (AT-trib-ute) feature or quality
- content - (CON-tent) the things that are inside; (con-TENT) happy
- entrance - (EN-trance) way in; (en-TRANCE) to interest and attract
- record - (REC-ord) a written account; (re-CORD) to write down or film events
- resign - (re-ZINE) to quit a position; (re-SIGN) to sign your name again
- resume - (ree-ZOOM) to start again or continue with; résumé -(REH-zoom-ay) a written record of work experience and education
- separate - (SEP-ar-ayt) to stop being together; (SEP-ret) not together
- subject - (SUB-ject) topic or theme; (sub-JECT) to force someone to experience something unpleasant
- suspect - (SUS-pect) a person thought to be guilty of a crime; (sus-PECT) to believe something bad may be true

