Let's Start!

Oooh. Post that online!

Learning Outcome

Understand detailed descriptions of real or imaginary events and experiences in present, past or future and in spoken or written texts.

Ask your partner:

- How often do you post online?
- How many people do you connect with this way?
- How much do you rely on Internet exchanges to keep you up to date with your friends?

Can Do Statements

- I can talk about technology and personal dilemmas.
- I can talk about what I will be doing or what I will have done.
- I can express something that may be possible.

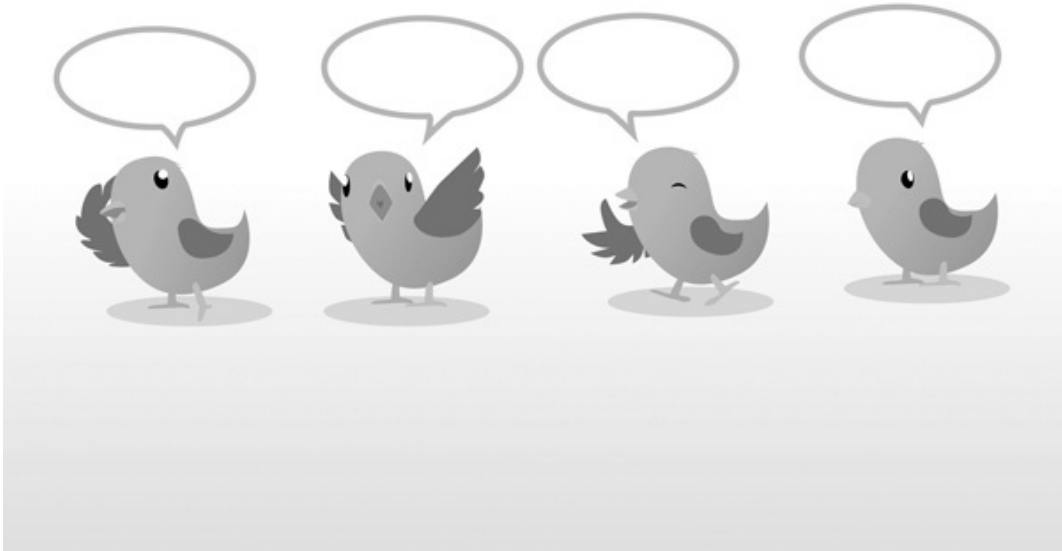

Let's Explore!

I'll be there in a few short hours.

* "In a few short hours" means that the time will pass quickly.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

In days past, I used to hear my mother say 'When I get there, we'll talk'. That doesn't really happen anymore. My trip home is just beginning and already I'm planning my weekend. The train is on the point of leaving but I am live chatting thanks to the on-board Wi-Fi. I hope everyone is picking up on the news that I'll be there in a few short hours.

I expect dinner will be on the table when I arrive. Mom knows my ETA thanks to Facebook. I don't doubt Gram shall arrive with her newest boyfriend in tow. I e-mail her regularly. She'll be happy to see me and give me some money under the table. She retires next year - then the gravy train will stop!

If I find a minute, I'm uploading the latest pictures. If I take more this weekend, I'm putting them up on my way home. I'm tweeting everyone now. If I haven't checked in for more than an hour, my friends are going to figure something happened to me! I mean, if they haven't been around, I'm worrying about them! If I get a new, bigger phone this year, doing this will be even easier.

I sometimes wonder why we all like to Facebook, tweet and Skype so much. I guess we just like gabbing. Of course I also find being away at college a bit lonely. Face-to-face screen time is so much better. I feel like nothing's changed, you know?

Gram says she used to write letters to all her friends - on paper - in the mail - with stamps! Isn't that insane!

I like keeping up to date too. The breaking news is always there. I get Twitter feed all the time. I just love being connected and thanks to social media, I am!

Let's Practice!

Peter expresses possible future events.

Learning Points

Other Ways of Referring to the Future

You use the Present Simple to express formal arrangements or dates in the future.
You use expressions like about to or on the point of to express events in the immediate future.

You use the Present Simple to refer to future time actions in future time clauses.

Example:

When I get there, we'll talk.

Present Simple is also used to describe fixed events that have a clear indication of date and time.

Example:

She retires next year.

You also use the Present Simple with various expressions.

Be about to, be on the point of, be due to, just/just about to refer to a moment in the future that is very close.

Example:

The train is on the point of leaving but I am live chatting thanks to the on-board Wi-Fi.

Examples:

- She retires next year - then the gravity train will stop!
- I expect dinner will be on the table when I arrive.

Learning Points

Expressing Possibility

You use the First Conditional with If clauses to exchange opinions about possible future outcomes.

You use the First Conditional to say it's possible that you will or will not do something. In that condition, something else may, may not will or will not happen.

The parts of the sentence are divided into two clauses: the If clause and the Condition clause.

Structure:

If + Present Simple/Present Perfect ... will / Present Continuous / be going to

Example:

If I find a minute, I'm uploading the latest pictures.

Examples:

- If I take more this weekend, I'm putting them up on my way home.
- If I haven't checked in for more than an hour, my friends are going to figure something happened to me!
- I mean, if they haven't been around, I'm worrying about them!
- If I get a new bigger phone this year, doing this will be even easier.
